

THE FIX IS IN

With plastic surgery procedures on the rise, surgeons who specialize in mending shoddy work have never been busier. ROB HASKELL meets the revisionists.

THE CLEANUP CREW

Whether you've been overstretched or simply underwhelmed, these top docs can cure your post-op blues.

BREASTS

G. PATRICK MAXWELL, Nashville
615.932.7700, maxwellaesthetics.com
"Maxwell never met a breast he couldn't improve," says cosmetic surgery consultant Wendy Lewis. An innovator with an architect's eye for detail, he draws on a wide variety of advanced approaches.

CAROLYN CHANG, San Francisco
415.923.3070, drcarolynchang.com
A multitasking, Stanford-trained surgeon, Chang makes it a priority to use the smallest incisions and least invasive procedures when revising failed enhancements.

EYELIFTS

ROBERT M. SCHWARCZ, New York
212.396.4400, naturalfacedr.com
Drooping lower lids, asymmetries, and hollowed-out sockets are among the issues he specializes in reversing.

MICHAEL GROTH, Beverly Hills
310.274.2525, drmichaelgroth.com
Groth's natural-looking lifts make him a top choice for surgery virgins as well as disconsolate second- (or third- or fourth-) timers.

FACELIFTS

SAMIEH S. RIZK, New York
212.452.3362, drsamrizk.com
Rizk operates with the help of a 3-D high-definition telescopic system that allows him to see every minute detail—especially helpful when performing revision work on the face and neck.
